

Jen Warner writes with passion, heart, and a wonderful eye for detail and compelling stories. Whether writing about family or social justice, her writing often features powerful narrative moments that reflect her thoughtfulness and curiosity about the world. One of the most dedicated, compassionate, and gifted writers I've worked with, she can handle fiction and poetry with grace and skill, but where she truly shines is creative nonfiction, combining a journalistic drive for truth and the creative writer's instinct for storytelling. Her life story is filled with poignant and inspiring moments, and characters that have the potential to serve as the foundation for many writing projects to come. I look forward to seeing how her writing journey unfolds.

Paul Pat
Associate Professor of English
Delaware County Community College